Last evening in Council Mr. Hildreth introduced a resolution inviting the Washington Hail committee to meet the city committee. It was on motion of Mr. Armstrong laid on the table until the reports were out of the way. When it did come up it was late and several members had gone home. It met with a very bitter fight, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Hildreth stated that he had essarily have to pass on it before it could reach the Legislature, still it was defented. Messrs. Armstrong. Clark. Commerford. Davis. Grogan, Haberfield, Kimberly, Smith and Walters voted against it and Messrs. Haller, Hildreth, Hoffman, Prince, Wingerter and Mr. President voted for it.

Messrs. Armstrong, Kimberly and Smith spoke very strengly against the resolution, Mr. Smith especially. There were those, according to his ideas, who wanted to revolutionize the city government, get up Commission Boards, which he stated would be followed by rings, cliques and frauds. Besides, Mr. Smith was afraid it would take all the work of Council from its hands. In addition, the Sixth ward member was afraid that these citizens were a class of men who wanted to rush the "revolutionary" measures through without giving the dear people a chance to vote. Mr. Smith spoke for a long time in this strain. Mr. Armstrong was suspicious of the W. H. meeting; it was to him a "star-chamber session" of rich and, influential citizens. Mr. Kimberly would have the W. H. committee petition Council to allow it to meet the city committee.

All of this, however, has not dismayed the which he had provided against any injury to the city's interests. He also quotes from a resolution recommended by the committee, and which he regards as more stick, and more objectionable to the railroad company,

Mr. Caldwell also recites that he was pushed and hurried in preparing the ordinance, and did not have a chance to revise it after first writing it. It was presented to Council without being read to the committee, but was read by Mr. Hall and Mr. Laughlin, and neither of them objected to more than one provision, which Mr. Caldwell maintains was ordered inserted in the ordinance by a majority of the committee. He explains the object of the provision concerning the Whittaker iron Company and Twentieth street, and closes by demanding that if there are charges against him, they be made in a regular and formal way, and an investigation instituted.

The paper was received, read and filed. Mr. Hall disclaimed any intention or desire to reflect upon the Solicitorin any way whatever, and quoted his remarks, to which the Solicitortook exception, to prove that they would read the solicitor of the temperature of the solicitor of the solicit

The Sidney arrived from Cincinnati at a late hour last evening with a good trip. This handsome sternwheeler will leave with Capt. List in command, for the lower ports this evening. Shippers take notice. The river rose steadily all day yesterday and last evening indicated on the gauge a depth of twenty-two feet six inches and rising slowly. The wharf was visited by a large number during the day who strolled down to watch the muddy rising water. Business was duli,
